

DARYL HANNAH

(Biography)

Daryl Hannah plays Cathy, a conservative American pleasantly surprised by island independence in "Summer Lovers." Since the age of four, Daryl has studied various forms of dance, and has performed professionally since age eleven, as well as juggling school work and classes at Chicago's famed Goodman Theatre.

Finishing high school early, she enrolled at USC, where she is studying philosophy. In addition to the university curriculum, Ms. Hannah continues working and attending acting classes, studying with Stella Adler among others.

Daryl's most recent role was Pris, an android, in Ridley Scott's upcoming "The Blade Runner." Not only did that role take advantage of her gymnastic abilities, but required that her every inch be covered under wigs, futuristic make-up and bizarre clothing, rendering her virtually unrecognizable.

Fortunately, that will not be the case in "Summer Lovers."

"Summer Lovers" is a Randal Kleiser Production, written and directed by Kleiser. Mike Moder was the producer and Joel Dean was executive producer. It is a Filmways Picture.
